Faculty Development Program on Art of Writing Research Manuscripts and Strategies for Publication

Writing effective research papers is vital for academic success. However, obsessing aimlessly over every detail is rarely the winning strategy. A better strategy is to invest your limited time strategically in the points that truly matter. Writing research papers is an art and also one needs a lot of hacks to know how to write a good paper and publish. An FDP was organised for internal as well as other academic scholars and teaching faculty members to understand the writing and publishing a lot better.

The resource person for the FDP was Dr. T. Manjunatha, a professor with VTU in the MBA department. A versatile academician, he has over 55 publications to his credit in most top journals. He is also known for his collaborations with a lot of renowned professors from around the world. A caring person by nature, he is a role model for his students and peers alike for his professionalism and research acumen.

Dr. Manjunatha began asking what is a good paper? And how does one write a good paper? One will need to select the area of research before writing a good manuscript and should choose areas where knowledge about those areas is good. He elaborated on the contents of a manuscript:

- ❖ Title
- ❖ Abstract also known as the executive summary
- ❖ Keywords
- ❖ Introduction also contains the literature survey
- ❖ Research Gaps
- Objectives
- Hypothesis
- Methodology
- Analysis of a report
- ❖ Implications of the Paper
- ❖ Conclusion (also talks about areas for further research)
- ❖ References: format of references is very important for acceptance

A lot of discussion, talking and reading is required to come out with an idea, link the idea to thoughts throughout the manuscript. A reviewer will want to know why the paper has been written; why study is needed for research; what work has been done as a researcher; if all the

The FDP was extremely comprehensive and a lot of the audience members had questions for the speaker. He said he hoped he will see a lot of publications in the next few years from all the audience members.
